Color Favored in Kitchens

The color scheme in the kitchen is the most important factor in the home. It sets the tone for the entire house. A color scheme that is too dark or too light can make the kitchen look like a prison cell or a hospital ward. A color scheme that is just right can make the kitchen a place where you want to spend your time.

Most color schemes for the kitchen are in shades of white, cream, and light blue. These colors are easy on the eyes and make the kitchen look clean and bright. However, some people prefer more dramatic colors like red, green, or yellow. These colors can make the kitchen look more lively and interesting.

For the People

The hopes of men have risen slowly through the ages—hopes of education and opportunity for their children, of decent homes, of a life with something more than drudgery and bare existence. Yes, even hopes of such plain things as running water and electric lights.

Near the end of the last century the people began their fight for low cost public water and power. That was not so long ago, yet in our time what began as a vision has been formed into reality.

What a long way we have come! On August 18, 1949, Ross Dam, fourth highest in the world, was completed and turned over to the people of Seattle. The roaring, turbulent Skagit River has been tamed; now it works at its task of serving man.

The whole job is not yet done. More than 600 men are now working in three shifts, night and day, to further increase the power capacity of your Skagit Project.

We all are vitally concerned in this undertaking. Housewives, workers, business and professional men—all are dependent on an ample supply of electricity.

Pleasant, low cost publicly owned power is a way to prosperity. It is one of the bright highroads to freedom from want and freedom from insecurity.

We people of Seattle are fortunate in our ownership of the Skagit Project, and in the lasting good it promises for us.
