Lynden Cemetery

The Lynden Cemetery

In 1889, the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons and the Odd Fellows founded the Lynden Cemetery on this site to create a community burial ground.

In 1891, the landowners, including the Judson, Tenant, Lawrence, Packard, Austin, Wilmore, and Cudworth families donated their properties to form the Lynden Cemetery Association.

The Masons maintained and operated the cemetery until June 13, 1974, when Lynden Lodge No. 56 conveyed its interest in the property to Whatcom County Cemetery District #10.

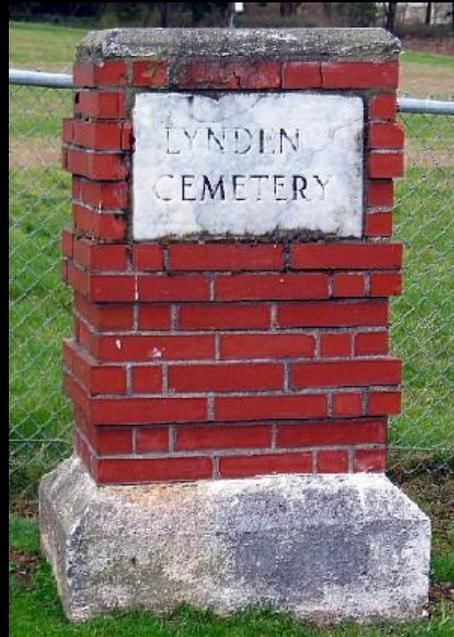

This is the only public cemetery in Lynden. Many of the town's pioneer families and early residents are interred in the cemetery, including Phoebe Judson, who is recognized in historical works and throughout the community as the "Mother of Lynden."

Visitors exploring the cemetery will find many interesting gravesites, including war heroes, the daughters of tribal chieftains, settlers, and homesteaders, with various fraternal and religious symbols and other historic treasures.

Dedicated this 29th day of May 2006.

We Do Need A Court House

LAST WEEK THIS county's board of commissioners filed preliminary request with the federal Public Works Administration for an $80,000 court house grant. Their action should meet with the wholehearted endorsement of Klickitat county property owners.

Built in 1888, the year before Washington gained statehood, Klickitat's 50-year-old court house has already been condemned by the state insurance commissioner's office. Outdated in every respect, the present court house besides being a fire hazard, is unsuited for modern county office requirements.

Within the cabinets and vaults of the Klickitat county court house and cottage are property records, many of them irreplaceable for an estimated $12,000,000 worth of Klickitat property. For as it did 50 years ago, could wipe out virtually all these records in an afternoon.

Other counties, some of them smaller than Klickitat, are now erecting new court houses. Stevens county only last week let contract for construction of a new steel and concrete court house building. Skamania county is working on a project to secure new county building.

With federal spending, through PWA and WPA, assured for another two years and perhaps longer, Klickitat county's commissioners were using excellent judgment in filing their request for a court house project.

PLANS FOR NEW COURT HOUSE SET

Klickitat Commissioners Engage Yakima Architect; Two Story Cement Structure Desired

Klickitat county's board of commissioners this week announced Leon Bussel, Yakima architect, has been engaged to draw plans for a new $80,000 county court house. The plans when completed will be submitted to the Public Works Administration for approval, S. F. Wauk, chairman of the board of commissioners announced.

Last week the board of county commissioners, S. F. Wauk, A. M. Watson and J. W. Dressel, accompanied by Norman Martineau, county sanitary engineer, made a tour of western Washington county seat towns inspecting court houses. On their trip they visited court houses in Prosser, Pasco, Ephrata, Asotin, Dayton, Pomeroy, Republic and Colville.

Two Story Structure

Under the present plans the commissioners will instruct their architect to design a two story rectangular building to be constructed of reinforced concrete.

The building would be located on the grounds now occupied by the old court house, jail and county cottage. Preliminary plans call for enclosures on the North and south side of the building. The jail would be located in the upper story. Accommodations for all county offices will be included in the plans.

Lyle Would Seek County Seat In November Election Vote; Attorney General Sought

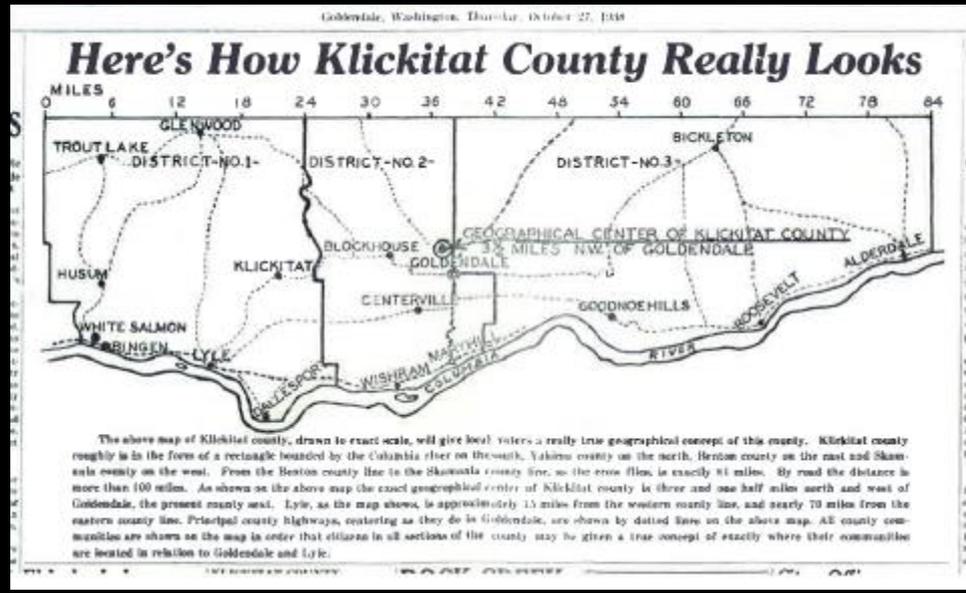

County commissioners today, Wednesday, were still counting and checking names on a petition filed last Friday asking that the proposition of moving the county seat of Klickitat county from Goldendale to Lyle be placed on the general election ballot.

According to Homer James, Lyle merchant, who with Chester Kin-said, and their legal counsel H. C. Bradley, presented the petition to the board of commissioners last Friday, the document bears 1730 signatures.

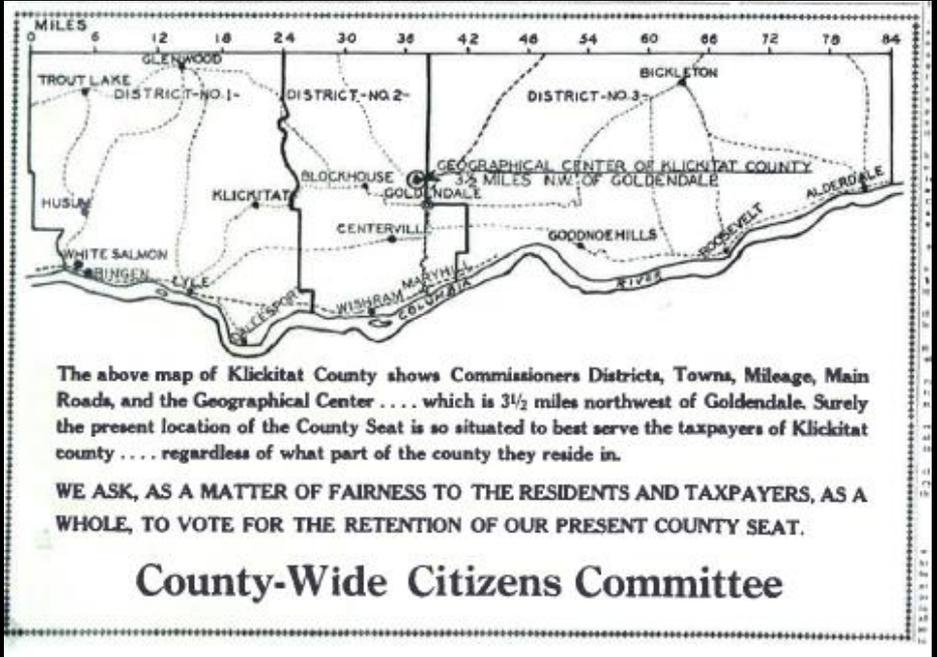

Seek Opinion

County officials through C. W. Ramsey, prosecuting attorney have contacted George W. Hamilton, state attorney general for an opinion on whether a county seat may be moved to an unincorporated town, such as Lyle. Ramsey said he expected an opinion from the state attorney general Thursday.

The law permitting the people of a county to move the location of their seat by petition and vote, was passed in territorial days. It requires that the signatures of qualified electors of the county equal in number to one third of the vote cast in the county at the last general Future Home of Clark County Offices?

Clark county voters will decide whether the building pictured above is to rise in Vanceboro as the future home of county offices. The picture is an artist's conception of the building for Architect D. W. Hilborn's plans were approved by the board of county commissioners yesterday. Voters of the county approve a bond issue to pay for its construction, the building will be above foundations measuring 200 feet by 100 feet. Its walls will be of reinforced concrete, six stories above the basement level.

Plans for New Court House Call for 6-Story Edifice With Stream-lined Design

By E. D. Souther

Clark county's commissioners applied a stamp of approval yesterday to a set of preliminary plans that will pave the way to a bond election this year and an application by the county for federal aid to erect a modern courthouse building.

The preliminary drawings were submitted by Day W. Hilborn, architect. They gave the first definite picture of a project that was proposed earlier this year to provide a building capable of housing all county departments under one roof and eliminating a hazard of threatens records now stored in building.

Six-story Building Planned

Hilborn's plans call for a fire-proof building that would rise six stories above the basement, and would present an appearance of modified modern architecture with molded concrete walls.

Foundation dimensions of the structure would approximate 200 feet by 100 feet with a step-back between the second and third floors that would reduce the dimensions to 184 feet by 74 feet on the upper levels.

His design was conceived with the purpose of depending on basic lines for architectural character, Hilborn said today. The building will lack entirely any superficial exterior facing or other adornment, he said.

Geometric Design Used

One finished drawing of the proposed building as it was submitted to the commissioners yesterday reveals the courthouse as a structure of geometric design with recessed banks of casement windows that will accent vertical lines. The only diversion from simple concrete walls will be given in a massive main portal rising two floors in height, and in molded panels between windows.

BOARD SEEKS PWA AID FOR COURT HOUSE

Resolution to Apply For 45 Per Cent of Grant

Deciding to bring matters to a head, after several hours of discussion following visits of delegations during the morning, the county commissioners late yesterday afternoon drew up and signed a resolution of intention to apply for a PWA grant for erection of a new court house.

The action at present is simply an entering wedge, it was stressed, to be driven later should the opportunity present itself and should public opinion support the move.

Plans in Nebulous Form

The board authorized Chairman Charles Garber to apply for the grant, and Engineer Charles Deako to furnish to Uncle Sam whatever information may be required incident to securing the funds. There is at present no decision as to the amount that would be needed for the job, no tentative plans for the new structure, and no final site. The idea is to apply now while the applying is still good, so to speak, and then fill in the framework with details later. Chief reason for this procedure is an impression on the part of sponsors of the proposal that the door to PWA grants may be closed shortly.

New Clark Courthouse One of Finest Plants in Northwest

County Offices All Housed and Room Remains

By Richard Kaaska

When the new courthouse doors are formally thrown open tomorrow afternoon, the county will at last realize a need it has long felt for the past decade or more—a need for a spacious, improved plant for its official business, centrally located, modern, convenient, reflecting the dignity of the county capital, and with room for future expansion. Without doubt, it is one of the finest in the entire Northwest.

The new building changes the status of the county from that of a town to a landmark with all its children under the same roof and collecting rent from sister-county offices besides.

Four Floors Busy Spot

Finding new quarters in the county capital, are the county clerk's office, the justice court, the district attorney's office, the county health department, and the fire warden's office, all county buildings. Furthermore, the seventh department of the Columbia National Forest, the farm inspector's administration, and the Red Cross have utilized extra office space booked in the building for future expansion.

On the first floor the business offices are located, the auditor's office with its marriage license counter, and the treasurer's office. Also on the main floor are the assessor's office, the engineer's office and the farm sector.

All Construction Lumber

Simplicity of Design Enhances Beauty of Clark County's Capitol

Depending on mass and proportion for its dignity and beauty Clark county's new court by administration. The county commissioner's suite, including a spacious meeting room, accommodating 200 spectators, and private offices, is in the second floor. The county agent's office, the office of the agricultural adjustment administration, the health department, and the school superintendent are located on this floor which overlooks the high vaulted forest lobby from a brass rated balcony.

Register on Two Floors

The drafting room of the engineer's office is on the ground floor directly under its main office. A spiral staircase connects the two branches. The sheriff's office, also on the ground floor, has an special entrance through the garage in the rear of the building for use when the main parts of the building are closed. Also on the ground level are the justice court, welfare department, the fire warden's office and the Red Cross.

As far away from the sheriff's office as it could possibly be placed, but in the safest spot in the entire building is the county jail—on the entire top floor. A private elevator opening only upon the fourth floor, where the courtroom is, connects the sheriff's office with the jail.

Heavy Court Room in Beavercreek

Two courtrooms were included in the fourth floor plans. One, designed for judge use when superior court judges will temporarily be used to house a completed courtroom is one of the most striking rooms in the entire building. The judge's bench, chairs, railings, jury boxes, benches for the audience, and even the walls have been finished in black walnut. The extra jury box was planned for use by the press or any officials attending a court session. Architect Dave Hillborn explained.

The county clerk's office and the juvenile department are also housed on the fourth floor.

The principal feature of the third floor is the assembly room, designed for use by veterans or politicians or other public functions. The long room can be divided into two parts by a sound proof curtain, when two separate meetings are being held simultaneously, and a kitchen at one end can be utilized for preparing refreshments at various functions.

Jury Roomettes Included

Other offices on the third floor are the jury dormitory, the prosecuting attorney's office, the law library, relaxation rooms for county personnel, and the office of the Columbia national forest.

It took almost half as long to plan the building and to draw up working drawings as it did later to construct the building. The

'Guests' Stay Put in New County Jail

The new jail on the top floor of the courthouse, the basis for the basement of the first floor building, where escape and attempted escapes have been so numerous that even the district attorney has lost count of the inmates with the old jail has departed once had to be broken from within as far as the top floor, several times were all in the "bank," they now have to be put into "padding" on the top floor of the courthouse with a nice attorney sleep in a ground from the wilderness and escape alarms and automatic locked doors between them and freedom.

Span Angle

The new jail will accommodate 70 prisoners and an unshaded portion can be utilized for housing an equal number more if the present quarters become overcrowded. C. M. Carter, manager of the building firm, explained today.

Highlights of the new jail house-battle are escape alarm at all window grills and all lights and doors. The alarm is set automatically when a light is cut. A remote control system makes it possible for one to open or close or to lock with a 48-man iron block on the floor without exposing them to the prisoners.

Another safety provision is the visiting period through which prisoners can talk to their friends, although separated by a mesh-like bullet-proof glass. The walls will permit sound to travel through but will not permit anything to be passed in violation to prisoners. And there will be no telephones. It is a loud voice to permit to be heard.

Elevator? Nix! Engineer Has Own Stairway

There's a casual touch to the office of County Engineer Charles Decker that is reminiscent of a companionably deep in the neighborhood of a navy's stowery.

When Decker wants to go from his office, on the first floor of the courthouse, to the drafting room, one level below on the ground floor, he doesn't bother with the elevator. Instead, he walks to the corner staircases into a narrow opening and descends 17 steps on a city.

It's the only stairway of his kind in the courthouse and was installed to show Decker's separation from the courthouse.

The laws of the United States provide that when an American woman marries a foreigner she becomes a subject of the governing power to which the husband owes allegiance. In this case Helen Aoki becomes a subject of the emperor of Japan.

Rev. H. H. Cowen of Trinity Episcopal church has been severely criticized for uniting the couple. He says he opposes Japanese, but with the consent of the girl's parents and a license to wed he considered it his duty to perform the ceremony.

TO COLLECT FOR GOOD ROADS

Residents of Pullman Seem Pleased With Results.

PULLMAN, Wash., Dec. 19.—Collections from abutting property owners in the improved districts are to be made in the immediate future to pay for the macadamizing of Pullman business streets. The city council fixed December 6 as the date for hearing objections from property owners. Not a single objection or complaint was made, and now the city treasurer is instructed to collect the assessments.

The cost of the work is about $256 a foot front for property on each side of the street. Thus a 50-foot lot pays $127.50. These collections are to be made at once, after which a settlement will be made with the bondsmen of O. H. Horton, the contractor who did the work.

Mr. Horton lost heavily on the contract, which was completed by his bondsmen. A number of bills and claims against the contractor are in the hands of local attorneys and will be paid by the bondsmen as soon as a settlement is reached.

The city secured excellent streets at a reasonable cost, and that the property owners are well pleased with the work is shown by their failure to register any complaints.

INLAND EMPIRE COMMUNITIES AT WORK; PULLMAN TO BE CITY OF PAVED STREETS

PULLMAN, Wash., July 3.—(Special.)—The city council at Pullman has voted to install 20 blocks of paving in the residence districts. Seven blocks are to be paved on Sunnyvale hill, while the remainder is to be placed on College hill.

Starting at Main street the paving will follow Star Route and Montgomery streets to the college campus. At the recent meeting of the regents the college board agreed to bear one-half of the expense of the paving adjoining the campus, and the plans are to continue the improvement for several blocks on Campus avenue, adjoining the college grounds, and terminating at the auditorium building.

The good roads movement at Pullman has received considerable attention by the farmers and business men of the town during the present season. As a direct result of the agitation of this question more road drags have been built and used by the farmers this year than in all the years previous.

DESIGN NO. 563—COST $5000.00.

This large log cabin with 8 rooms, having 4 bedrooms on the second floor, also two bath rooms, was built on the shores of Puget Sound among the tall pines of Washington. The size of the house is 31 feet 4 inches square. A large living room, which is 26x12 feet, is surrounded on three sides with a 18-foot porch. Logs for the construction of this were peeled and oiled. There is no plastering in the house, both interior and exterior being left in the smooth log finish. The large fire place of cobble stones in the living room and the big chimney in the dining room, built on the outside, are some of the most attractive features of this cabin. Over the living room there is an open well looking into the chambers and bath room. This log cabin has attracted wide attention all over the country, and has been illustrated in some of the leading Architectural Journals of the country. The views given herein will show the interior arrangement to better advantage than a mere explanation of them. The floors have all been polished so that they can be used for rugs. Book cases and china closets have been built in. The dining room mantel is circular, of pressed brick. An interior view is shown on the following page, leading through the living room into the dining room.

Country Home of Seattle Auto and Driving Club

Iskeller Cafe, the new club-house of the Seattle Auto and Driving Club, at Aiki Point, will be opened June 26 in the former home of W. J. Bernard. The club, which is composed of a number of the best-known men in the city who go in for driving, riding and automobilism, has taken a lease on Fir Lodge, one of the handsomest places at the Point, and will maintain clubhouse that will be up-to-date every particular. The house is built of huge fir logs with the interior finished in the same manner. A feature of the house is the huge living room that across the front of the building. The second floor gallery overlooking the living room. Upon this gallery the doors of the second floor rooms all open. The house is being furnished with all latest ideas in club furniture and be outfitted with a view for the members. large front porch will be fitted up an outdoor dining room and there will be four private dining rooms on the second floor. The entire building will be under the supervision of Borngesser, who is well known as a first-class caterer. He was connected with the Rathskeller, the Butler and other cafes for the last seven years and resigned his position with the Rathskeller to take of the club at the solicitation committee.

AUTO AND DRIVING CLUB IS OPEN

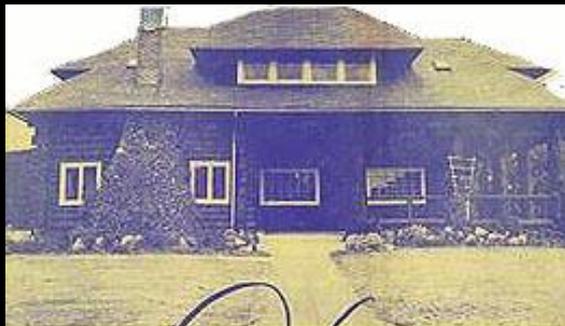

Fir Lodge, Former Country Seat of W. J. Bernard, Fitted With All Comforts for Large List of Members.

The new home of the Seattle Auto and Driving Club at Aiki Point was thrown open to the members yesterday morning and hereafter will be the scene of many cosy dinner and supper parties by the automobile and horse enthusiasts who make up the membership of the club.

"Fir Lodge," the former country seat of W. J. Bernard, has been refitted and furnished as a modern country club and under the management of "Charlie" Borngesser, former head waiter at the Rathskeller and The Butler, will prove an attractive objective point for those who ride or "auto" to the other side of the bay.

The club, which is composed of a number of the most prominent men in the city, has taken a lease on the building and grounds and will have one of the handsomest places at the Point. The house is built of fir with huge pillars made of natural logs as supports for the roof. A feature of the house is the huge living room around which runs a gallery upon which open all the rooms on the second floor.

The large front porch has been fitted and furnished as an open air dining room and there will also be private dining rooms on the second floor. The entire building will be under the supervision of Borngesser who, at the request of the executive committee, resigned his position at The Rathskeller to take care of the clubhouse.
